Overview of 7 Steps to Becoming Financially Free

Presenter: Phil Lenahan, author, and Catholic financial planner

In our modern, materialistic culture we all tend to keep our faith and our finances in two separate boxes. In contrast, the 7 Steps program is based on the belief that how we handle our money is a strong indicator of the vitality of our spiritual life. This eight week, small group study is designed to develop one’s ability to manage resources from a faith-filled perspective. It includes a book, workbook and DVD. Participants support each other throughout the process with prayer and discussion, and no one is ever asked to disclose personal financial information. Materials are published by Our Sunday Visitor and will be available for preview. Parish leaders and Stewardship Committees interested in learning more, or hoping to bring the 7 Steps program to their parish are most welcome. Contact Jennifer Wemhoff to register, 563-391-8384 or olvrek6@qwestoffice.net.

St. Ambrose Stewardship Institute
A collaborative initiative of St. Ambrose University, the Diocese of Davenport, the Diocese of Des Moines
and the Archdiocese of Dubuque
2009

Purpose: The purpose of the St. Ambrose Stewardship Institute is to develop parish leaders who will promote stewardship within the Diocese of Davenport, the Diocese of Des Moines and the Archdiocese of Dubuque.

Methods: The Institute will use a variety of approaches to learning about stewardship. These include: sharing of ideas in person and by email; reading and writing occasional reflections about statements, articles and books about stewardship; reflecting weekly on Scripture; meeting face-to-face with a coach on a regular basis; meeting face-to-face with other participants and coaches at the beginning, middle and end of the Institute; and participating in efforts to infuse stewardship ministry into a parish. An alternative model that some participants can consider is the parish model, in which a small group in one parish (or one area) gets together on a weekly basis during both of the 8-week sessions of the Institute and shares the experience face-to-face.

Responsibilities: The responsibilities of the participants of the Stewardship Institute are: to read and reflect on weekly passages from Scripture; to read other materials from the books and reading lists; to share weekly reflections with a coach about the Scriptural passages and other readings; to meet at least once per month with a coach; to attend three face-to-face gatherings with other participants and coaches; to write a concluding personal reflection (once during both of the 8-week sessions) to a coach about the readings; to assess stewardship ministry in their parish and present the findings to their pastor; and to get involved in parish stewardship ministry.

Commitment: Participants will make a commitment to advance the ministry of stewardship in their parish.

Support: Support and encouragement will be provided by each of the diocesan offices and leaders of stewardship ministry in the three participating dioceses, by St. Ambrose University and by other participants and coaches of the Stewardship Institute.

Facilitator:

Dan R. Ebener, Director of Stewardship
Diocese of Davenport
563-324-1912, ext. 268
Ebener@davenportdiocese.org

Key contacts for the Institute include:

Msgr. Tom Toale, Archdiocese of Dubuque T.Toale@arch.pvt.k12.ia.us
Joan Bindel, Diocese of Des Moines JBindel@dmdiocese.org

Session One

The emphasis for the first session will be on the spirituality and theology of stewardship.

- a. Opening Day: All participants and coaches are expected to attend the opening event in their diocese. It will include an explanation of the practical logistics of the Institute and instructions on the technology to be used. Each participant will be matched with a coach at Opening Day.
