A Word from Father...

Dear Friends,

Another week...another Vatican tempest in a teapot!

So last week, Cardinal Robert Sarah, prefect of the Congregation for Divine Worship and Discipline of the Sacraments, told a conference of Catholic liturgists in London, that he highly recommended that priests and bishops the world over should begin celebrating Mass ad orientem, which literally means "facing the East", and which practically means returning to the pre-Vatican II practice of the priest at the altar with his back to the congregation, or as proponents of the change would describe it, "facing East WITH the congregation, as we await the Coming of the Lord (like the dawn)."

As you can imagine, the Cardinal's suggestion caused quite a stir in the "Catholic blogosphere" and the press; many presuming the change was a "done deal" and new orders from the Vatican were forthcoming, while others dismissed his words as mere suggestion. More traditional Catholics were ecstatic, more moderate or liberal Catholics were quite agitated.

By the end of the week, a statement from the Vatican Press Office made it clear that Cardinal Sarah was speaking for himself and not the Pope in particular or the Church administration in general. The statement in Vaticanese, made it pretty clear that he had strayed beyond what was "helpful."

Many, myself included, were relieved. I have no fight with those who appreciate the pre-Vatican Tridentine liturgy, ("the extraordinary rite"), which can now be prayed openly and often for those who wish it. But I do have a bit of a beef with those who would like to transform the "ordinary rite"...that which has been our common way of celebrating the Eucharist for over fifty years now into a pale twin of the older rite. The "new order of the Mass, (is it still "new" after more than fifty years?), has its own dignity, solemnity, and beauty. It echoes the liturgies of the early church when the faithful gathered in homes or "domestic churches", as they were called and even the Lord's Supper itself with the disciples gathered around Jesus as he shared with them his body and blood. It can be celebrated poorly, as the Tridentine Rite can be, but when it is celebrated well, it is a spiritually rich and communally deep sacramental moment of love and life in the Lord. I have found over the past 37 years as a priest that "facing the people" is not a distraction or a separation from the faithful, or from the Lord for that matter, but an experience of communion with both the people and with the Lord that is often sublime.

Anyway, no one is going to be pushing the altars of our churches back up against the wall anytime soon. It was all just one of those occasional Vatican tempests in a teapot...gratefully so.

Enjoy the summer!

Fr. Kevin
